He Said She Said

Before the party, the couple reads this list together and secretly agrees on who actually says each line. At the party, guests circle B for bride or P for partner next to every quote. Then the couple reveals their official answers one at a time, gasps and cackling encouraged. Whoever matches the most answers on the couple's key wins. Ties go to whoever has known the couple the longest.

HOW TO PLAY

How to Host He Said She Said

Before the Party

Send the couple their answer page a few days early and have them fill it out together, B for bride or P for partner on every line. Collect it back and keep it hidden. That sheet is your answer key, and the game is only as good as your poker face. Print one game sheet per guest and set out pens.

During the Game

Hand every guest a game sheet and give them five to ten minutes to circle who they think says each quote. Encourage lobbying, alliances, and wildly confident wrong answers. Then read each quote aloud and reveal the couple's real answer. Guests tally one point per match as you go.

Crowning a Winner

Highest score wins and earns permanent bragging rights as the person who truly gets this couple. Break ties with a lightning round: the couple names one quote and tied players shout their guess first. A small prize is fun, but announcing the most hilariously wrong guesser is even better.
