HOW TO PLAY

with love

Start Here: Hosting a Shower That Flows

What's Inside

Twelve games plus a bonus write-in itinerary. Print one sheet per guest for the quizzes, bingo pages, word scramble, and predictions; one host copy for the read-aloud games; and cut the card pages (Advice, Two Truths, Superlatives) on the lines. Cardstock turns the advice cards into a keepsake.

A Shower That Flows

Start Find the Guest as people arrive so nobody hovers by the punch bowl. Run the quizzes and word scramble while everyone is seated, deal out Baby Bingo during gift opening, and save the Superlatives and Advice Cards for the very end. Predictions can float all afternoon on a side table with good pens.

House Rules

Every game is family friendly, so grandma, coworkers, and small cousins can all play. The parents-to-be count as a team: mom-to-be and her partner both get a vote. Nobody has to answer anything they would rather not, and the mom-to-be wins every tie. She is growing a person. She gets the tiebreaker.

Baby Bingo

Everyone gets a card at gift-opening time. Mark a square when it truly happens, no staging and no bribing the gift table. First five in a row calls out baby bingo and wins a prize plus the front row seat for cake.

A handmade gift	Tiny socks appear	Someone says so tiny	A bodysuit is held up	Mom-to-be happy tears
A gift bag with tissue paper	Diapers unwrapped	A book instead of a card	Someone guesses the name	A blanket gets passed around
Grandma-to-be takes photos	Someone says they grow so fast	FREE	A gift needs batteries	Two of the same gift
Ribbon saved for a keepsake	A stroller or car seat appears	Partner writes down every gift	Someone asks about the due date	Seconds on dessert
A hand knit item	Advice given mid gift opening	The tiniest shoes you ever saw	A group photo attempt	Someone offers to babysit

BINGO

Find the Guest

Your card is a room full of soon-to-be favorite people. Find a guest who matches each square and write their name in it, one name per square and no using yourself. First five in a row wins, and so does everyone who finally learns which cousin is which.

Traveled over an hour	Is a grandma	Knew mom-to-be in school	Works with the mom-to-be	Has twins in the family
Is a neighbor	Has changed 1,000 diapers	Introduced the parents-to-be	Has a baby under one	Is at their very first shower
Shares mom's birthday month	Has four or more kids	FREE	Can sing a full lullaby	Brought the biggest gift
Is wearing pink or blue	Has baby photos on their phone	Once babysat the mom-to-be	Is a cousin	Was born in the same month
Knows the secret name list	Drove someone else here	Has been to five plus showers	Still mails paper birthday cards	Will cry before cake is served

Two Truths and a Lie: Parenthood

Keep the deck in printed order and read the claims aloud in rounds of three: every round hides exactly one lie, and guests vote on which claim is the fib. Five rounds, then the final card settles any tie. Host key, keep it folded: the lies are claims 2, 6, 7, 11, and 15, and the tiebreaker answer is about 2,500 diapers. Cut along the dashed lines.

 two Babies are born without kneecaps. Soft cartilage stands in until toddlerhood.	two The average baby says a real first word by four months old.	two Newborns cannot cry actual tears. The waterworks arrive weeks later.	two Babies are born with around 300 bones, far more than the adult 206.
two A newborn's stomach on day one is only about the size of a cherry.	two Most babies can recognize themselves in a mirror by two months old.	two Newborns blink more often than adults to protect their brand new eyes.	two Many newborns can recognize their mom's voice from the very first day.
two Babies spend far more of their sleep dreaming than adults do.	two A baby's fingerprints are fully formed before they are even born.	two Babies arrive with fully developed color vision, sharper than an adult's.	two Most babies double their birth weight by around five months old.
two Newborns sleep sixteen or more hours a day, just never all in a row.	two Babies are born with a reflex to hold their breath and paddle in water.	two The average baby takes their first steps at seven months old.	two Tiebreaker: no voting, just guess. How many diapers will baby use in year one? Closest answer wins.
